Message from the Executive Director

Dear AETH Community,

In 2025, we were reminded with clarity and renewed hope of the purpose of our Association. Every initiative, partnership, and training space reflected our shared commitment to walking alongside leaders, churches, and institutions that faithfully serve God's people in diverse contexts, for the transformation of society.

This Impact Report is more than a summary of accomplishments; it is a collective testimony to what happens when mission shapes our decisions, and community sustains the journey. In 2025, AETH strengthened over twenty biblical institutes, expanded access to theological education through micro-scholarships, published three new books, launched a new membership portal filled with digital resources, and accompanied hundreds of leaders through in-person gatherings, virtual events, and strategic partnerships within and beyond the United States.

Behind every number in this report is a story: a vocation supported, an institution strengthened, a theological voice affirmed. All of this has been made possible by a community deeply committed to service, excellence, and the legacy of theological education and leadership formation for the future, building bridges between the Church, the academy, and the community.

I am deeply grateful to our members, Board of Directors, staff, partners, donors, consultants, and the broader community who journeyed with AETH over the past year. Your trust and generosity continue to make possible a Hispanic theological education that responds to today's challenges with integrity, relevance, and hope.

I invite you to explore this report with both gratitude and vision, recognizing that what we built in 2025 is the fruit of shared effort, and at the same time, a seed for what is yet to flourish.

With gratitude and commitment,

Rev. Dr. Jessica Lugo Meléndez, MBA, MDiv
Executive Director
Association for Hispanic Theological Education (AETH)

35 Years in Service to Hispanic Theological Education

Since 1991, the Association of Theological Education for Hispanics (AETH) has advanced the quality, relevance, and sustainability of theological education in Hispanic contexts. What began as a network of educators and church leaders has grown into an academic and ministerial community that accompanies institutions, certifies programs, and strengthens Christian leadership across the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, and Latin America.

Grounded in a biblical vision of the Kingdom of God and in the Church's calling to form faithful disciples, AETH integrates academic rigor, strategic collaboration, and institutional accompaniment. Our commitment to excellence, integrity, and service is reflected in every partnership and formative process.

As we approach our 35th anniversary in 2026, we reaffirm our identity as an academic network serving the Church and its mission in the world.

Our Mission

To promote theological education of excellence and relevance for Hispanic leaders in their service to the Church and the world.

Our Vision

That every Hispanic congregation and ministry be led by well-equipped leaders serving the whole Church and society for the glory of God.

➤ Formation, dialogue, and community that accompany leaders in their call and strengthen the mission of the Church today.

AETH's first institutional podcast

The Young Líderes program with AETH was born out of a commitment to accompany a new generation of leaders who serve the church and the academy with passion, thoughtful questions, and hope. Beyond the meetings and activities held in 2025, what has been most meaningful is the creation of an intergenerational space where leaders walk together, engage in theological reflection, and cultivate relationships that sustain their calling. This year, we saw membership grow, fellowship deepen, and new opportunities for collaboration emerge. As we move into 2026, we do so with a clear vision: to continue walking alongside leaders rooted in faith, committed to their communities, and prepared to innovate with fidelity and courage.

Capacity Building for Biblical Institutes

In 2025, AETH's Capacity Building for Bible Institutes program marked a significant step forward in strengthening the institutional foundations of Hispanic theological education. Developed in collaboration with Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary and supported by Lilly Endowment grants, the initiative moved beyond theory into tangible transformation. Through specialized training, expert consulting, and strategic micro-grants, Bible institutes across the United States were equipped to clarify their vision, strengthen governance, and build sustainable administrative structures.

This year also represented the successful completion of the pilot phase. The Maestro a Maestro course fostered peer learning and faculty development, while a newly implemented operational dashboard streamlined proposal submissions and reporting processes. Progress reviews were completed, final disbursements were responsibly administered, and post-course assessments confirmed meaningful growth. What began as capacity development became institutional confidence, preparing institutes not only to meet certification standards, but to lead with greater clarity, stability, and faithfulness to their mission.

This is a Lilly Endowment grant-funded effort.

Expanding access to theological knowledge and forming leaders who serve the Church with wisdom, depth, and vision.

Compelling Preaching is a homiletical approach that understands the pulpit as a space for the holistic formation of the people of God. Rather than merely refining techniques, it seeks to integrate identity, theology, trauma, and mission into the practice of proclamation. In communities shaped by migration, historical wounds, and cultural tensions, preaching becomes at once a hermeneutical, therapeutic, biblical, prophetic, and formative act. Its purpose is not simply to improve communication, but to cultivate preachers who proclaim hope with biblical depth and pastoral sensitivity, forming resilient congregations capable of discerning their time and actively participating in God's transforming mission.

In 2025, AETH strengthened the formation of preachers through the Compelling Preaching Program, creating academic and collaborative spaces that support preaching that is clear, contextual, and filled with hope. This initiative helped pastors and leaders deepen their sense of call, share theological insights, and build faith communities committed to the Church's mission.

This is a Lilly Endowment grant-funded effort.

National Initiative to Strengthen Hispanic Pastoral Leaders and Congregational Teams (NISHPLAC)

In coordination with Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary, NISHPLAC represents a strategic initiative within the Hispanic pastoral leadership ecosystem, designed not only to provide resources but to strengthen institutional capacity, clarify purpose, and promote long-term sustainability. Rather than responding solely to immediate needs, the program creates spaces for collaboration, shared learning, and strategic planning among organizations that have historically operated with strong vocation yet limited structural margins. Its deepest impact lies in consolidating networks of trust and accompaniment that enable institutions to move from reactive survival to intentional organizational maturity, thereby strengthening the future of Hispanic pastoral leadership in the United States.

With Deep Gratitude:

As we bring this 2025 Impact Report to a close, we do so with hearts full of gratitude and hope. We are grateful for a community that continues to recognize and uphold the power of theological education as a force for transformation in churches, institutions, and communities. We are hopeful for the road that lies ahead, which continues to call us to serve with faithfulness, vision, and renewed conviction.

The year 2026 invites us to celebrate a profound milestone: 35 years of AETH. Three and a half decades of walking alongside called leaders, equipping ministers, and strengthening institutions. Years of honoring the voices and wisdom of those who came before us, and affirming a Hispanic theological education that responds with integrity to the realities and hopes of our people. These are our roots deep, vibrant, and nurtured by a community that believes formation is an act of justice and faith.

As we celebrate, we also look forward. The challenges of our time compel us to reimagine how we form leaders, expand access to theological reflection, care for those who serve, and build institutions prepared for the long journey ahead. These are our horizons: open, collective, and full of promise.

As we enter 2026 and the years to come, may we continue to walk with deep roots and open horizons, trusting that God is present in our midst calling us to serve with hope, creativity, and love.
